

Welcome to the Journal of Oral & Maxillofacial Research first issue

Gintaras Juodzbaly, DMD, PhD, Professor, Founder and Editor-in-Chief

Welcome to the Journal of Oral & Maxillofacial Research first issue. This is an open access peer-reviewed international scientific electronic journal conveys scientific progress of all sciences relevant to oral and maxillofacial associated structures in health and disease.

Our goal is to develop and maintain our position as an eminent journal on dentistry and maxillofacial surgery within the associated scientific literature. Rapid publication from acceptance to print provides timely communication of the latest research to the global oral, dental and maxillofacial community.

Academics and clinicians enjoy online free access ensuring a very broad international readership and wide dissemination to researchers and clinicians in this field.

Many thanks for all Authors, Reviewers, Associate Editors, Editorial Assistant and others, who made contribution to the success of our journal. This was a true work team and each team member voluntarily offered their time and talent for the creation of this scientific journal and preparation for its publication. Furthermore, we are convinced that objectivity and quality can be maintained only through anonymous peer-review process.

JOMR is an international journal and the appearance of such electronic publication is very important event for practicing clinicians and creative academics from Baltic States, who are concerned with medical problems in oral and maxillofacial regions. This is the first electronic journal of the Baltic States in this field.

We all desire to promote and improve the quality of JOMR. I am asking all my colleagues to follow the main JOMR principle: “Scientia maximum vitae decus” and make efforts to reach the growth of the journal and its scientific indexing.

Wishing you all a creative and happy New Year - 2010!
